Tariq and His Experience in Angel League

Bright floodlights and crisply-cut, vivid green grass characterize the Allen Station Softball fields. The sky is smeared with strokes of dark orange, a deep yellow, and fading blue. A line of batters forms on field number one, as outfielders and basemen take their positions. The smell of fresh air is colored with the scent of oak and maple, with the fragrance of sod adding to the cornucopia of flavors. Views of bright batting helmets and dark leather gloves capture the attention of eager onlookers. Seasoned baseballs are littered throughout the field, serving as memories of the warm-ups that took place not ten minutes earlier. As the sun sets on Texas every Monday night, Angel League commences.

Angel League is a service hosted by the Kiwanis, the parent organization of Key Club, that matches volunteers from the Allen High School baseball team and Key Club with special needs baseball players. The service has existed since 2016, providing both students and special-needs children and teenagers with an enjoyable experience. Allen Parks and Recreation, the owners of Allen Station Park, was gracious enough to provide field one of the Park free of charge for Angel League games every Monday. Participants descend on the field every Monday for the fall and spring seasons at 5:30 PM for baseball games. Special needs students are given the opportunity to play in a fun and supportive environment, with the encouragement and help of “buddies” or volunteers.

Tariq Ahmed vividly remembers his first experience with Angel League in September of 2019. The memory of the calming field and sprightly, young baseball players fascinated him. Today, Mr. Ahmed, the current Vice President of the Allen High School Key Club, is responsible for operating Allen Key Club games in Angel League, corralling volunteers for the service and working in tandem with

Mr. and Mrs. Gifford, the Kiwanis sponsors in charge of running the service, but the story of how Tariq Ahmed became involved in Angel League is convoluted, and involves some level of sheer luck.

Mrs. Gifford attended a Key Club business meeting in late August, scouting members to serve in Angel League. Mrs. Hodson, the lead sponsor of Key Club, recognizing the need for straightforwardness and efficiency in the process of recruiting volunteers from AHS Key Club to Angel League, decided on appointing a Key Club liaison from the board for this purpose. The person chosen was Tariq Ahmed, a now integral part of the operations of Angel League. Reminiscing on the moment, the current Vice President says he was hesitant at first. "I had worked with special-needs students in middle school, but never on such a large-scale as in Angel League," he thought. "How am I supposed to do this?"

Starting out in his role as liaison in September 2019, Tariq Ahmed ventured out to softball field one of Allen Station Park. He was anxious at the prospect of managing such a large operation, encompassing 25 Key Club members and about 15 players, but one person served as motivation for Tariq. Nasreen Murad, a senior in Key Club at the time, had shown up early to the opening week of Angel League. Mr. Ahmed, being tasked with operating Angel League for the first time, enlisted her to aid him in running things smoothly during the inaugural week of Angel League. Her assistance was vital, serving as encouragement to the beleaguered Tariq. Throughout the course of the season, Mrs. Murad would be at Tariq's side, providing confidence to Tariq, believing in the then Sergeant at Arms and acting as a boon to the development of Mr. Ahmed as a leader in Key Club and Angel League.

Two years later, Tariq Ahmed reflects positively on his experience as the leader of Key Club's involvement in Angel League. Following the close of the fall season in the last week of October, a banquet was held in honor of the students and players involved in Angel League. Participants were invited for dinner at the First Baptist Church of Allen, who generously hosted the event. Tariq Ahmed was recognized for his work in the service, being invited to speak at the banquet.

"I would like to thank the students involved in Angel League throughout the season. We really appreciate your work and I couldn't do the work I do without your involvement," he stated. Above all, Mr. Ahmed is grateful for the experience he has gained in leadership for Angel League, and the memories he was able to make along the way. Tariq Ahmed looks forward to his final season of Angel League.

"I'm glad of the opportunity to run Angel League and am proud of the work we do. Let's make this last season a good one!"

Chocolate Bars

By : Madison Johnson

Out of all the services I have ever participated in, the World's Finest Chocolate Fundraiser for my Allen High School Key Club was by far the most enjoyable. In short, The World's Finest Chocolate fundraiser is an opportunity that involves students selling a given sixty chocolate bars to their peers and family.

As a result, the student gains service hours and their club, in my case Allen High School Key Club, receives the profits and puts them towards a cause of their choosing. My experience with this fundraiser opened my eyes to the possibilities that open up when taking on a difficult task.

When I first heard about this service opportunity, I was immediately interested because it seemed like a fun way to get hours. Also, my schedule was so packed and between soccer, other clubs, and family events, that I couldn't find ample time to get service hours. I decided to sign up for the Chocolate Fundraiser, and the next day, I picked up my box of chocolates. I was immediately amazed with the assortment of flavors, and although I don't like to eat chocolate myself, I could imagine that people would enjoy these flavors. But then I began to think about the massive number of chocolate I needed to sell compared to the small number of people I knew during the early weeks of my freshman year. I began to stress that I wouldn't be able to sell all my chocolates in time, or if ever.

By : Madison Johnson

However, I knew I needed to try. The first person I sold it to was my grandma and that got the ball rolling. The next thing I did was bring my box to school to see who would even want any. Turns out, lots of people were craving chocolate that day. Before lunch, I had sold half my chocolate and by the time I got on the bus, I was out of chocolate completely. People even texted me after school asking for me to bring some for them tomorrow, but I had to say I sold them all. I was first astonished at this fact, then I realized I was actually really proud of myself. I was wrong to doubt myself and I learned that even when I'm unsure, it pays off to at least try to reach my goal, because it is easy to underestimate your abilities.

Participating in the World's Best Chocolate fundraiser ignited my passion for service, while teaching me a valuable lesson about trying new things. I never believed that selling chocolate bars at a dollar a piece would bring me so much joy and accomplishment, but it did. If I could, I would do the fundraiser a hundred more times. I recommend that everyone discover something in service that brings out an unexpected aspect of yourself, just as I did.

Friday Night Lights

By : Elias Munteanu

The Allen Football Team is often known as one of the best in Texas, finishing among the top of its ranks in district and state standings, and boasting a 60 million dollar stadium. Add in the addition of former Arkansas University head coach, Chad Morris, and the team seemed destined for success.

Despite the storied history of the Allen Football Team, as well as being able to claim one of the leading MVP candidates in the league this season, Kyler Murray, as one of its own, the team has been lackluster this season, posting a mild 6-2 ranking entering the playoffs. Despite this, Allen football fans consider one aspect of the Friday night lights experience to be essential, that is concessions.

Allen Key Club is one of many organizations operating the 3 concessions stands located at the Allen Football Stadium. Spearheading the operation for AHS Key Club is Mrs. Hodson, AHS Key Club's lead sponsor. Throughout the course of the season, Mrs. Hodson and Allen Key Club volunteers can be found operating the North end concession stand, by far the most active of the 3. They work hard to ensure the line of over 100 football enthusiasts can be serviced in a timely and quality manner. I had the opportunity to experience this first hand, observing volunteers preparing food and checking out customers at the football game.

By : Elias Munteanu

The operation was efficient, with cashiers as a first line of defense against the onslaught of patrons. Though the work was tiring, volunteers kept an upbeat attitude. Amongst the bustling iconic red-shirts of Chick-Fil-A and plethora of cooks behind the counter popped the teal hue of Allen Key Club t-shirts.

The experience at concessions was an eye-opening one, if not stressful. The dedication required to work one of these services was apparent, with the constant flow of customers adding to the pressure, but it is a rewarding service. Concessions are not for the faint of heart, and I experienced that first-hand, gaining a new respect for the Key Club members consistently involved in the service, week to week. Mrs. Hodson in particular, deserves utmost praise for her involvement in the service. Being able to manage some 20 Key Club members and getting them to serve customers in a timely and consistent manner is not a task that is envied, and her commitment to concessions benefits the image of Allen Key Club as a whole.

Angel League Banquet

By : Elias Munteanu

The night was crisp. With fall finally reaching Texas, the weather was much cooler. Typically on Mondays in the fall, I'd find myself at Angel League games, but this particular Monday, Angel League decided to celebrate the conclusion of the fall season with a special banquet. Lights bombarded my view as I approached the First Baptist Church of Allen, the location of our banquet. Upon entering the church, my sense of smell was met with the scent of pizza, drinks, and contentment. Angel League participants were spread throughout the plethora of tables in the building, over 100 of them.

After enjoying our meal, the procession began. Awards were handed out to the players and their "buddies". There was a brief introduction of each player, accompanied by a wave of cheers. Towards the end of the ceremony, Key Club liaison to Angel League and Vice President, Tariq Ahmed was invited to speak. He thanked the participants for their work, heralding the commitment that each of them had made to show up every Monday without fail. Treats were provided to each participant on a table in the rear, celebrating the work of each player and volunteer in the season. The experience was an emotional one, with some volunteers realizing this would be their penultimate season, and lamenting at that fact.

By : Elias Munteanu

After the procession was over, I and Tariq Ahmed, Vice President of AHS Key Club, ushered Key Clubbers out of the building and aided in tidying up the building. Reflecting on my experience in Angel League, I was reminded of how meaningful the experience was to me. I enjoyed the haven of the Allen Station Park softball fields, they were therapeutic in a sense, a characterization I often use.

But beyond that, the opportunity to serve special-needs children in our community is a unique one. I'd never been or heard of an experience like it before attending Allen High School. I am grateful for the opportunity to be part of such an experience, and am excited for my final season of Angel League in the spring. Most of all, I look forward to meeting the players on the softball field again. Each of them has a unique playing style and personality, choosing to express themselves on the field. I've made and met many friends so far. My partner Reagan, for example, embraced the elbow bumps I and Anish, another Key Clubber involved in Angel League, gave him after every hit and base run. This is what I look forward to the most next season, the small moments of enjoyment and sheer fun, recaptured from a past childhood, that I get to share with my fellow volunteers and players.

The Chocolate Box Saga: Conclusion

By : Elias Munteanu

Chocolate boxes have been covered before in our newsletter, but I wanted to address some of the problems our board encountered as well as the processes behind the service. Historically, our Allen High School Chocolate Box service has received much praise from members, with volunteers enjoying the process of being sales representatives on behalf of the club for a month while also earning service hours for it. The service consists of members filling out an interest form before attending one of the many pick-ups offered for boxes. Students' information is logged along with their box number, and Key Clubbers are given until the end of the month to sell 60 chocolates for a dollar each. Teachers even get involved in the service, offering chocolates at the beginning of each period to students entering their classrooms. The results this year were astounding, with over 250 boxes distributed to students, and more demand past the 252 boxes supplied. But the seemingly easy process is very structured behind the scenes, with special attention given to it by board members.

By : Elias Munteanu

The most crucial component of the service is the all-mighty “Chocolate Box Spreadsheet”. It logs which students have each chocolate box, the amount of boxes each student has received, and if the student has returned the box. But before the board could distribute chocolate boxes, they had to be transported to our Key Club closet located in the teacher’s lounge, numbered, and color-coded by number.

Each set of 25 received a different color, working as a sort of batch system for the boxes. At each distribution site for chocolate boxes, each member was logged and given their box. After about two weeks, Allen High School Key Club board members decided to start collecting money for the boxes, a yet more complicated process. School policy dictates that only teachers are allowed to handle physical bills collected from a fundraising event. As such, students were only able to drop off money from their sales at designated sites, such as collection centers at business and service meetings, or rooms of Key Club sponsors.

Despite the amount of work that went into making the chocolate box service happen, the results were worth it. Though the financial result was itself astounding, the enjoyment of Key Clubbers shone through, with many of the volunteers expressing their enthusiasm and enjoyment of the service to board members directly. The results speak for themselves, and AHS Key Club is excited to reintroduce the service next year.
